Panel: Funding of Nonprofit Organizations: Philanthropy, Charitable Donations, and Commercial Revenues(Public and Non-Profit Management and Finance)Thursday, November 7, 2019: 10:15 AM-11:45 AMPlaza Building: Concourse Level, Plaza Court 5 (Sheraton Denver Downtown)*Names in bold indicate Presenter

Organizer: Samuel L. Myers, University of Minnesota

Panel Chair: Samuel L. Myers, University of Minnesota

Discussants: Jodi Sandfort, University of Minnesota and Steven Belton, The Minneapolis Urban League

This session brings together scholars from diverse fields to share their research findings on the funding of nonprofit, community-based organizations. The first paper tests the hypothesis of philanthropic disinvestment in African American nonprofits in the Twin Cities in Minnesota. The second paper proposes a new measure of the efficiency of nonprofits and studies donors' responsiveness to the efficiency of nonprofits in the housing sector. The third paper examines the effect of transparency on nonprofits' financial performance on donative revenues using empirical evidence from China. The fourth paper focuses on commercial revenues and studies the impacts of such revenues on the use of volunteers.

Together, these four papers cover major funding sources of nonprofits from philanthropy, donation, and commercial revenue. These four papers also approach this topic from both the perspective of donors and the perspective of nonprofit recipients. Empirical evidence is from both inside and outside of the United States. The two discussants are from academia and from practice respectively, to stimulate insightful discussions on the papers and their findings and to bridge empirical results to practical applications.

presented as a part of paper session Race, Inequality, and Criminal Justice Policy

In The Growth of Incarceration in the United States, the National Research Council documents the large and persistent racial disparities in imprisonment that accompanied the more than quadrupling in the U.S. incarceration rate since the 1980s. But since the turn of the 21st century, an unprecedented decrease in the number of African American women incarcerated has occurred at the same time that the number of white women in prison grew to new heights. The result of these changes is a near convergence in the black-white female incarceration rates from 2000-2015. In some states, the changes occurred abruptly and almost instantaneously. In other states, the convergence has been gradual. But, overall, the wide gaps in black-white female incarceration rates evident at the end of the last century have diminished considerably by the first decades of the 21st century.

On April 3, 2019, the Center for the Study of Free Enterprise at Western Carolina University will host Dr. Steve Ha from Western Carolina University and Dr. Samuel Myers from University of Minnesota-Twin Cities as part of the Free Enterprise Speaker Series.

"Race Inequality: A discussion with Samuel Myers and Steve Ha on Race Neutrality" will feature a discussion about Ha and Meyer's new book, Race Neutrality, and the research that went into it. Their book addresses ongoing racial disparities, race-conscious policies that attempt to remedy them, and race-neutral alternatives that might "...hold great promise in reducing disparities."
WCU's Free Enterprise Speaker Series is a forum for the campus and community to explore all points of view on important issues of the day, hear from renowned experts from a variety of fields and understand multiple perspectives.
